

CORPORATE ACCOUNTABILITY FOR WORK-RELATED DEATHS

PROGRAMME FOR 3 OCTOBER 2006

8:30 Registration

Chair: Dave Whyte, Stirling University

9:30 Opening Remarks

9:45 Corporate Homicide Legislation

Scottish Executive intentions

Cathy Jamieson MSP – Justice Minister (invited)

Proposed culpable homicide bill consultation

Karen Gillon MSP

Analysis of legislative issues: competence and complexity

Jenifer Ross, University of Strathclyde

The Union view

Grahame Smith, STUC

A family's view

Dorothy Wright, f.a.c.k

Questions

11:45 Break

12:05 Under-recognised death from work: Part 1

Undercounting of traumatic work-related deaths

Steve Tombs, John Moores University

Work-related cancer deaths

Andy Watterson, Stirling University

Questions

1:00 Lunch

Chair: Ian Tasker, STUC

2:00 Under-recognised death from work: Part 2

Work-related death in the news

Neil Mackay, Sunday Herald

Campaigning for occupational health

Tommy Gorman

Questions

3:10 Fatal Accident Inquiries: are they doing the job?

An overview of FAIs

John Watt, Procurator Fiscal

Cameron Ritchie, Procurator Fiscal

A critique of FAIs into work related deaths

Frank Maguire, Thompsons Scotland

A family's perspective

Questions

4:30 Finish

CONTRIBUTORS

Karen Gillon is the MSP for Clydesdale.

Tommy Gorman is a campaigner on asbestos victims rights.

Cathy Jamieson is the Justice Minister of Scotland.

Neil Mackay is Investigations Editor of the Sunday Herald in Glasgow.

Frank Maguire is a senior Partner at Thompsons Solicitors and specialises in health and safety and personal injury law. He is also President of the Society of Solicitors Advocates.

Cameron Ritchie is the Area Procurator Fiscal for Fife.

Jenifer Ross is a Senior Lecturer at Law School of the University of Strathclyde in Glasgow. Her principal legal interests have been in employment and criminal law.

Grahame Smith is Deputy General Secretary of the STUC.

Ian Tasker is the Assistant Secretary of Health and Safety at the STUC – a position partly supported by Thompsons Solicitors in Scotland.

Steve Tombs is Professor of Sociology at John Moores University in Liverpool. He is the Chair of the Centre for Corporate Accountability.

John Watt is the Area Procurator Fiscal for Argyll and Clyde.

Andrew Watterson is Professor and Head of the Occupational and Environmental Health Research Group at Stirling University.

Dave Whyte is a senior lecturer at Stirling University and has written widely on corporate crime issues. He is on the Board of the Centre for Corporate Accountability.

Dorothy Wright's son Mark was killed at work in 2005. She is a founding member of Families Against Corporate Killers (f.a.c.k.)

